Spilahem Twin Birth
Story of Resiliency
for k'wəme? tə
səx^wsux^w

with Sue Sterling-Bur, Ph.D.
Candidate

Sue will share her Spilahem/personal birth story of her twin boys k'wəme? tə səx^wsux^w, which shows the resiliency families need when they experience a birthing journey that includes the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit for their children. k'wəme? tə səx^wsux^w, Avery and Emmett were delivered 7.5 weeks earlier than expected. As an Indigenous mother, Sue will share the support and resources that helped her and her family survive a three-week NICU stay and identify the Indigenous supports that would have helped them through this experience

Closing 3:30 pm - 4:00 pm Heather Cameron, RN, BCAPOP Executive Director

Breakout Sessions

Pregnancy Plot Twists: Unraveling the Mystery of Medical Complications!

with Dr. Alicia Power, MD &
Dr. Sarah Lea, MD

From hypothyroidism to hypertension and everything in between, this session aims to offer a comprehensive review of the most prevalent medical issues during pregnancy. The session format is designed to be evidence-based and accessible, avoiding medical jargon and acronyms. Instead, the focus is on delivering straightforward insights to help enhance your care for pregnant patients and clients.

Understanding the reasons why babies aren't ready to latch, as well as, honoring the unique journey of all chest/breastfeeding dyads is an important role for any perinatal professional working with perinatal families. This session will provide perinatal professionals who support lactating people with the ability to establish and identify an effective latch using hands on experience with tools, which support chest/breastfeeding people who are experiencing challenges getting baby to latch. Together we will explore a myriad of tools used to manage a baby not ready to latch. We will look at hand expression, pumps, finger feeds, spoon feeds, nipple shields, bottles and cups. We will work through case scenarios as a group so that you walk away with concrete knowledge and a tool kit to help our families that are struggling.

"My Baby Won't Latch": Management of chest/breastfeeding difficulties

with Erin Fulton
RN, BScN, IBCLC, MSN

Inviting Fear Forward

with Morgan
Glover
CBE, CBS, LCI

Pregnancy is a transformational and vulnerable time, where many expectant parents anticipate the childbirth process with fear. As supporting professionals and peers, we have the opportunity to lean in and invite this powerful emotion forward. When we honour and embrace what is true for our clients, relationships deepen, and the potential for healing transpires. After participating in this breakout session, you'll feel inspired and equipped to hold presence through difficult conversations and help your clients find courage in the face of fear.

Breakout Sessions

Reducing Stigma: Tools to Support Women and Gender Diverse People who use Opioids

with Dr. Nancy Poole, PHD and Lindsay Wolfson, MPH

Women and gender diverse people who use opioids experience stigma, particularly in the context of pregnancy and parenting. This stigma impacts how those who are pregnant and postpartum are able to access health and social services. In this breakout session, we will introduce tools from both the Mothering and Opioids: Addressing Stigma, Acting Collaboratively resource and a digital guide on women+ centered chronic pain approaches, offering the hands on opportunity to see the utility of these tools in various contexts of programming, personal practice, and cross-system collaboration. These tools offer strategies for reducing stigma and improving the health, safety, and needs of women and gender diverse people in our practice.

To empower perinatal professionals and helping peers with a deep understanding of child and infant rights as outlined in the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and the British Columbia Child and Family Community Services Act. This workshop aims to provide practical insights and strategies that align with the diverse approaches of perinatal professionals and helping peers, ultimately enhancing support and outcomes for pregnant, postpartum, and newly parenting individuals and their infants. This workshop is designed to cater to the unique context of perinatal support, emphasizing the importance of diversity, collaboration, and practical application of child and infant rights principles. The interactive elements, real-life case studies, and panel discussion will create a dynamic participant learning experience.

Nurturing Child and Infant Rights: A Collaborative Approach for Perinatal Professionals and Helping Peers

PRESENTERS

Keynote & Breakout Presenter

Erin Fulton,

RN, BScN, IBCLC, MSN (she/her)

is a Kamloops public health nurse with 22 years experience supporting families through their journey of pregnancy, labour, birth and postpartum. I have been a certified childbirth educator for 20 years and am very passionate about creating a safe, healthy space for families and health care providers to support woman through the beautiful journey of mothering. I have 3 children of my own and one granddaughter. My passion for perinatal nursing and educating came from my personal birth experiences. My current position is in a specialized program that supports young vulnerable woman and their children, to be happy, healthy, safe and successful in reaching their heart's desire.

Feature Presenter

Sue Sterling-Bur

Ph.D. Candidate (She/Her)

is from the Nl̓eʔkepmx and Sto:Lo Nations and is the Vice President for Students for the Nicola Valley Institute of Technology(NVIT), the only Indigenous public post-secondary in B.C. Sue's educational experience includes having an Early Childhood Diploma and a Master's Degree in Social Work; she is currently a Ph.D. Candidate at UBC, Okanagan. Her doctoral research will provide a perspective on Indigenous ways of knowing, being and supporting children with differences and disabilities. She will base her research on the Nl̓eʔkepmx Spilahem stories to identify the ethics, values, and Indigenous knowledge that will guide working with and supporting Indigenous people with disabilities.
